Last Review: 27 September 2024

ETL Systems Ltd are committed to maintaining conformity with global materials legislation and carry out monthly reviews of all reportable materials within the IEC 62474 database. If existing materials are found to be reportable, or new materials are added to the IEC database, then a policy of elimination and substitution is implemented, hence minimising risk to customers, downstream users, and ETL staff.

Consequently, all items within the ETL Systems product catalogue are declared free from all substances that are regulated – where applicable to the product type – by the following legislation:

Some materials on the Proposition 65 list – including but not limited to nickel, beryllium and their compounds – are intentionally used in small amounts (<0.1% by total mass) in ETL Systems products. If use of the finished product is in accordance with the operating instructions provided, and restricted to professional users only as advised, the risk of exposure to the end user is minimal.
